Thanks to the generosity of Indiana hay producers, things are looking up for Oklahoma and Texas cattle producers, whose feed supplies were wiped out by a summer-long drought. Through Hoosier Haylift, Indiana farmers donated 1,500 tons of hay, even though they, too, are weathering difficult economic times with low crop and livestock prices. Led by Indiana Agriculture Commissioner Joe Kernan, Purdue Extension was one of several Haylift partners, coordinating hay pledges and recruiting volunteers to load hay.

Purdue University School of Agriculture
1140 AGAD Building
West Lafayette, IN 47907-1140
Solving the mystery of E. coli